

CONDÉ NAST

Traveler

The Dallas Hotel Where Couture Is Delivered to Your Room

Designer duds are now on demand.

Travel and fashion have long gone hand in hand. So, when a brand perfectly combines the two, we take notice. That's exactly what happened when Hotel Crescent Court in Dallas decided to launch their new "Dressing-Room to Guest-Room" service, which provides an over-the-top shopping experience from the comfort of your room.

The hotel partnered with Stanley Korshak, the largest independent department store in the country, to provide a selection of couture clothing delivered directly to a guest's room or suite. Whether you need an outfit for a gala, business lunch, or just a night on the town, all of the upscale apparel will be brought to the room where you can try everything on and decide what to buy. This includes everything from dresses and sport coats to shoes and accessories. All unwanted items are sent back and for the clothes you do choose, an on-call tailor is available to make sure the designer duds fit perfectly.

To book the service, just call the hotel prior to your arrival and they will set it up upon request. Then Stanley Korshak will provide a stylist who will get in touch with you to develop a style profile of your measurements, sizes, favorite fits, cuts, and looks, as well as color palettes, designers, occasion, and more. While there's no cost to sign up for the service, guests must spend a minimum spend of $3,000 with Stanley Korshak to participate.