The Spa at Hotel Crescent Court in Dallas recently unveiled its renovation as part of the hotel's $30 million project.

The Hotel Crescent Court, formerly known as Rosewood Crescent, is steps away from the Dallas Arts District. The 22,000 square foot renovation of the spa and fitness center is complete with 16 treatment rooms, men's and women's lounges, a whirlpool with hot and cold dip, relaxation rooms, and a couple's suite. Other amenities include a nail salon with multiple manicure and pedicure stations, a spa lounge, retail space, and wellness center featuring TechnoGym equipment.

“We’re thrilled about the opening of The Spa at Hotel Crescent Court as it brings one-of-a-kind offerings to the hotel,” said Andrew Davidson, the hotel’s general manager. “The Spa is an important cornerstone of the hotel’s $30 million enhancement project, slated for completion in early spring 2018. We are confident it will soon be the talk of the town, and we are eager for visitors, locals and club members alike to experience the sparkling new space.”

Interior design firm Michelle Meredith + Associates oversaw the renovation of the spa. The spa was designed with a modern vibe while maintaining the original French Renaissance feel of the hotel. The artwork and materials in the spa were selected to show natural forms and patterns using blue, grey, lavender, and cream. Designed with elements of nature in mind, the spa encourages guests to relax and unwind upon entering.

The spa also unveiled new packages along with the renovation, like the Romantic Getaway for couples, and Texas Spa Day where guests can experience services from HydraFacial, an Uptown Luxury Pedicure, and the Ginger-Coconut Sugar Glow. It also offers a variety of services, like the Green Tea Soothing Facial, an ideal option for those with sensitive skin, or the InjectStem Bio Firming Facial, which is also referred to as “botox in a bottle.”

Along with the unveiling of the renovation, The Spa is offering a membership called “New Year, New Spa, New You” for the first 100 people who join by March 3. Members enjoy access to the fitness center, personal trainers, and group exercise classes. Guests can also gain access to the resort-style swimming pool, preferred spa service and hotel room rates as well as upgrades, complimentary three-hour valet and self-parking, special dining offers, and exclusive events.
